hm44

Alexander Taylor's hm44 collection has been extended to include sofas and tables in addition to the original armchairs and footstools. High- and low-back options are available on the chairs and sofas. Careful selection of foam grades and a flexible back support provide great comfort while retaining the sharp lines that define these dynamic forms. The entire range is available with natural beech legs, and the chairs can also be specified with a self-centering swivel base.

Internal frames are of beech with elasticated seat and back suspension; upholstery is of graded CMHR foams with a polyester wrap. Table tops are of white laminate with beech edging. Legs are of solid beech with a clear lacquer finish; the optional swivel chair base, with matching fixed pedestal for the footstool, is finished in a mid-grey epc. Seat height is 350mm.

Born in 1975 in north east England, Taylor studied furniture and product design at Nottingham Trent University. He began his career with London-based architects Procter Rihl before setting up his studio in 2002 to realise his own designs.

Development of the hm44 range with Hitch Mylius started in 2003. Taylor's awards have included Elle Decoration Young Designer of the Year in 2005, and his designs have been acquired for the New York Museum of Modern Art's permanent collection. As well as designing for manufacture, Taylor also lectures and has run workshops in the UK and abroad.
